THE MODERN HOUSE

DKH VI, Dog Kennel Hill

DKH forms a striking landmark on the brow of Dog Kennel Hill. Externally it mixes timber louvers, mesh panelling and stone gabions with panels of colour to create a fluid façade. The rear elevation is made almost entirely from opaque glass, so that it lights up like a magic lantern at night. The building offers secure entry, an external courtyard, a covered bicycle store and a lift to the upper floors.

DKH was the first major building of John Smart Architects, who have since completed a number of intelligent, enterprising projects. They were voted one of the world's top 50 best emerging architects by Wallpaper magazine. As well as winning the RIBA award, DKH was runner-up in the Evening Standard Best New UK Housing award, and runner-up in the Grand Designs Best New UK Housing award.

DKH is situated within a short walk of East Dulwich station (regular trains to London Bridge take approximately 12 minutes) and Denmark Hill station (regular trains to Victoria, Blackfriars and London Bridge). Recreational space is available at Crystal Palace, Dulwich Park and Brockwell Park. There is a supermarket adjacent to the building, and the shops, bars and street markets of Lordship Lane are close at hand. Dulwich Village is also within easy reach.
