

THE MODERN HOUSE

Orchard Drive, London SE3
Sold

North Several

A four-bedroom modern house forming part of an award-winning terrace, in a fabulous location with the green spaces of Blackheath on its doorstep. Arranged over three storeys, and with floor-to-ceiling windows overlooking the heath, the house was designed in the late 1960s by the architect Royston Summers. Accommodation amounts to approximately 1,500 sq ft.

North Several is a small group of seven houses built to the highest standards for a collective of private individuals that included the noted playwright and novelist Michael Frayn. Set among communal gardens, the houses are of an eye-catching glass, concrete and brick construction. Featuring large open-plan spaces and wonderful views, the houses caused considerable excitement when they were built, winning a design award from the then Minister of Housing and Local Government, and they continue to garner praise to this day. This particular house was where Summers lived, and still contains a lot of the original built-in furniture.

A DLR service to Bank and Canary Wharf runs from nearby Lewisham.
