

Pat Midgley Lane, Sheffield £225,000 Leasehold

Park Hill III

This immaculate two-bedroom dual-aspect duplex apartment forms part of Phase II of Sheffield's exemplary Grade II*-listed Park Hill. Originally built between 1957 and 1961 to a design by Jack Lynn and Ivor Smith under the supervision of J. L. Wormersley, the recent award-winning refurbishment was overseen by architects Mikhail Riches.

Life and colour are brought to these 'streets in the sky' by bright panels that replicate the brick tones of the original facade, emphasising its modular structure. Located on 'Norwich', the top 'street' of the development accessible via lift, the apartment's iconic interiors marry aluminium-framed floor-to-ceiling glazing with engineered oak flooring and exposed concrete structural elements faithful to their brutalist heritage.

The Estate

Informed by ideas of community, as well as the modernist tenets of materiality, light and space, Park Hill is lauded as a masterpiece of brutalist architecture. The original design comprised four ranges linked by bridges and was arranged at obtuse angles to optimise the panoramic views across the city and the southern Pennines. Conceived as 'streets in the sky', four levels of street decks – wide enough to carry milk floats – sit atop a 'high street' of local services on the lower levels.

Working initially with architects Studio Egret West, Hawkins Brown and Grant Associates, the award-winning Urban Splash embarked upon a comprehensive redevelopment of the entire estate in the early 2000s. Phase I was shortlisted for the 2013 RIBA Stirling Prize, and Phase II, the Mikhail Riches scheme, won the AJ Retrofit Award 2023 – 'Retrofit of the Year', Housing & Design Award 2023.

The Tour

Adopting a light touch approach, the architects of Phase II have focused on celebrating and restoring the original building, the very essence of its fabric and design.

Sustainability is embedded throughout – keeping, making good and bolstering the best parts of this iconic scheme.

External rendered panels, in mid-century tones of blues, greens and purples, have been chosen to complement the earthy hues of the existing brickwork, while the interiors also pay homage to the 1960s. The apartment, one of very few on the estate with balconies at the front and rear of its plan is on the 12th floor and is entered on the lower of its two levels.

Brightly coloured front doors – in the case of this apartment blue – add to each home's unique identity. A patterned carpet guides towards to a central hub housing the hallway with storage space and an elegant stairwell; this leads immediately to the open-plan living, dining and cooking area. Oak flooring runs underfoot and stands in contrast against the raw concrete walls.

The flexible, light-filled living space overlooks the communal gardens and commands far-reaching views. Sliding doors offer access to the balcony; a perfectly private outdoor space for relaxing. The kitchen area has a fresh, light and airy feel, with white wall and base units, solid ply worktops and a mosaic tile backsplash.

The timber staircase ascends to the upper level with two generous double bedrooms, each affording further panoramic vistas. The main bedroom has plentiful open storage and dressing space, an en suite shower room and particularly commanding views over Phase 1 of Park Hill. The other bedroom sits at the rear, offers bespoke wardrobes and has a south-facing balcony, providing a lovely spot for morning coffee. The current owners use this room as a study and workspace.

The smart family bathroom sits between. The clean architectural lines continue, with minimalist details, crisp white fittings and micro-cement flooring.

Outside Space

In collaboration with Hawkins\Brown and Studio Egret West, landscape architects Grant Associates plotted a regenerative masterplan for the external spaces of Park Hill. Creating a setting that combines real purpose with beauty, attractive to people and wildlife and birdlife alike, the result essentially wraps the brutalist backdrop in a park-like blanket.

Each space has a clear function, is rich in colour and pops with elements of surprise and interest. Small courtyards and gardens populate the upper slopes; middle slopes offer communal gardens for playing and relaxing, while lower down there is an opportunity for larger, more public gatherings.

Further amenities include an on-site nursery and café, along with new workspaces for businesses, artists and students, and the provision of secure parking – available for rent for £50/month.

Since the completion of the first phase, a new public park, South Street Open Space, has been created by Sheffield City Council between the nearby railway station and Park Hill.
