Ruskin Park House
Champion Hill, London SE5

This excellently proportioned one-bedroom apartment, with private balcony, is situated on the fourth floor of Ruskin Park House, a wonderful modernist development positioned on Champion Hill in Camberwell. Designed in the 1930s by Alexander Stuart Gray and William Watkins, Ruskin Park House stands in beautifully maintained gardens as a monument to British Modernism.

Ruskin Park House is comprised of 241 flats in three blocks divided by formal gardens maintained by the estate’s live-in caretakers. The blocks are arranged in ‘zig-zags’ with semicircular bay windows on each floor forming part of the estate’s archetypal Art Deco style. It is one of the few blocks of its era to retain most of its period features including Crittal windows, a laundry and the aforementioned exquisitely tended gardens. While Ruskin Park House is renowned for its beautiful streamline aesthetics, the architects were rather pragmatic in their approach to design. Gray, who trained under Lutyens, has described his approach to Ruskin Park House in self-deprecating tones. ‘[It is in]… the style of those days… long lines, bow windows… a modernistic style.’

This particular flat is arranged around a balcony with stunning view across central London. The balcony is partly recessed into the plan, offering shelter, privacy and integral troughs for flowers and plants. The balcony can be accessed from either end of the property, via the bedroom or the living/dining room. As such, the separate spaces of the apartment are bathed in natural light and flow together entirely organically. Between the bedroom and living/dining rooms, sits a newly fitted kitchen with beautiful marble worktops and a generously sized bathroom.

Ruskin Park House is positioned on the slopes of Champion Hill, minutes from the cafes, bars and restaurants of Camberwell, including Silk Road, The Daily Goods, The Camberwell Arms and Theo’s. There are also excellent galleries in the vicinity, including the South London Gallery recently extended by 6a Architects, Hannah Barry in nearby Peckham and the Dulwich Picture Gallery.

Ruskin Park House is wonderfully served by public transport. Denmark Hill station is within 5 minute’s walk, running Thameslink, London Overground and National Rail services across to London Victoria, London Blackfriars, Clapham Junction and nationwide.
